KERN PARTNERS FOR CHARACTER AND EDUCATIONAL LEADERSHIP

Radical Hope For Formative Character Education

June 26–28, 2022

During times of radical historical change, what well do we draw from as practitioners of formative character education? At this gathering, we invite you to think with us about two wellsprings of renewal: radical hope and communities of practice. Forming others to lead flourishing lives within imperfect communities requires an examination of our own attitudes, practices, and habits. Radical hope, drawn from Jonathan Lear’s exploration of ethics at the horizon, invites us to imagine new practices and concepts in light of our commitments to human flourishing and in response to the world as we find it. Communities of practice are sites of professional learning where growth is a consequence of mutual engagement in a joint enterprise. Radical hope and communities of practice, as wellsprings of renewal, call us together and ask that we attend to problems of practice to imagine, in community, new ways into the future.
